There are lots of other reactions to grief not listed here.

Grief is like a fingerprint, it is unique and personal to you. Whatever you experience it is normal for you.

Others might not react to loss in the ways that you do. That's OK, everyone is different!

Waves of grief come and go

Crash in on you all at once

Bruise you and hurt you

Feel out of control

Be rough and sometimes gentle

Creep up on you unexpectedly

Grief can be really tough.
Grief can sometimes make you feel you are going crazy.

It affects how we think and feel,
how we do things and our relationships with others.

It can affect our bodies physically.

Remind yourself that grief is normal after loss and it won't always feel that way.

Don't expect the memories to go away.
The memories are ours for as long as we live.

You will never forget the one who has died, nor will you 'get over it'.

You will learn to accommodate the loss into your life

There will be good days and bad days and you will get through it.

Talk to people you can trust, let what is inside out, talk about memories, worries, feelings, thoughts and questions.

Time out is important, find ways to relax and chill out.

Its OK to smile, to laugh and to enjoy things. Life has lots of good things in it, even during tough times.

Use support around you. Its important to ask for help, even if people don't always get it right.

Don't expect too much from yourself, you are only human.

Keep safe — avoid taking risks.

Eat well, and keep active.

Avoid making hasty major decisions.

When to seek help

Are the intense feelings overwhelming or unbearable?

Have there been or are there still a number of stressful factors in your life that are making it difficult to cope?

Is there no one to share your feelings with?

Are you using alcohol or drugs to excess?

Is your work/school performance suffering?

Are you noticing behavioural changes in your children?
